LISTENED TO REPORTS

Some Interesting Figures Presented by Baptist Association Officers.

FINANCES OF THE LAST YEAR.

Treasurer's Report Shows That Members of That Denomination Have Assisted in Noble Manner—Appointment of Standing Committees

The afternoon session of the Baptist Association was called to order at 2 [illegible] Tuesday. The report of the associational missionary committee was the first business called. Rev. [illegible] presented the treasurer's and Rev. J. R. Stark the secretary's reports, both of which were accepted. These were followed by the reports of eleven missionary pastors concerning the present state and progress made by their churches. Seven reported the [illegible] of new church buildings and asked the help of the association. Few are in the process of building and one or two have new churches and flourishing congregations. The next report was by the committee on new church [illegible] [illegible] new churches [illegible] Rev. W. P. [illegible] [illegible] churches and Rev. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] delegates. Dr. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] association.

The venerable Dr. [illegible] [illegible] address [illegible] [illegible] the church and [illegible] of attitude owing to the [illegible] continuance of His [illegible] his home. Dr. Dutson led the [illegible] half hour in prayer and praise.

The reports of the committees [illegible] charter for the association and for the missionary committee occupied the remainder of the time until adjournment. The sessions were long on Tuesday and [illegible] Pritchard was scarcely allowed time enough to [illegible] his many guests.

The evening meeting of the association was devoted to [illegible] missions, especially among the Slavs. Strong addresses were made by W. [illegible] Price, state superintendent of missions; Rev. H. C. Gleiss, pastor of the First German Baptist Church, Pittsburg; Rev. J. J. Davis, moderator of this session, and Rev. Paul S. Kensseff, formerly pastor of a Baptist church in Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria. Mr. Kensseff is now at work [illegible] at Wilmerding among the people of his native country. He spoke of the depths of [illegible] intimate acquaintance with the [illegible] and his address stirred the large audience to enthusiasm. Mr. Kensseff expects to devote his whole time to mission work among the Slavs.

On Wednesday morning there were devotional services conducted by Rev. C. W. Fletcher. The reports of standing committees were then called for. The committee on temperance presented a vigorous report calling attention to a recent organization among the temperance forces called the Abolitionists of the Drink Traffic and Intemperance. Rev. William Courson of Washington, Pa., gave a stirring and complete report of the Bible School colporteur, the Gospel wagon, the chapel car and the publishing work of the American Baptist Publication Society.

Christian Education as fostered by the Pennsylvania Education Society was reported upon by Rev. J. M. Patterson of New Kensington. Rev. D. T. Price of Turtle Creek reported on Systematic Beneficence, and was followed by Rev. Dr. W. A. Stanton of Pittsburg in an address on this subject. Dr. Stanton is a member of the national Christian stewardship committee and is an expert in regard to this most neglected doctrine of stewardship. In this connection it should be stated that during the past year our churches in the association contributed $168 48 87 for all purposes, an average of $16 27 per member. Of this total $2[illegible],108 was given to missions, an average of $2.27 per member. According to the government statistics it is a fact that the Baptists in this association contribute almost one-tenth of their income. This is not generally true, many giving scarcely anything and some contributing generously, so that the total gifts equal almost a tithe of the total income.

Rev. G. A. Sheets of Pittsburg reported on home missions and Dr. H. R. Moseley, superintendent of missions in Cuba, gave an address on Work in Eastern Cuba. Dr. Moseley is very optimistic for Cuba and urges a most earnest and aggressive work in that island. The business of the session was brought to a close after the appointment of standing committees for 1904.

This afternoon there will be a report of the Young People's Union by Mrs. H. N. Jones.

HOBEN TRIAL IS OVER

One Defendant, Hoben, Accepted a Verdict of Voluntary Manslaughter.

AINSWORTH AND EVANS GO FREE

Trial of Pals Anderson for Killing Tony Serafin at Fayette Station Taken Up This Morning—Robbed Italian and Then Shot Him

Uniontown, June [illegible]—At the opening of court before Judge Umbel Tuesday afternoon the case of John Hoben, John Evans and Charles Ainsworth, charged with the murder of Mike Mechanic, was resumed. The first witness called was Joe Wolf, a boy 13 years old, who was at Vorrell's house the night of the trouble. He said he went to the house in the morning and stayed there until about 12 o'clock that night. He was in the house when the trouble began but went out and saw John Hoben hit Mike Zernock with a club. He also saw two other fellows hit him but could not see what they hit him with as it was too dark.

Thomas Pratt, a [illegible] at the [illegible] Frick works, was called. He [illegible] was making his regular rounds when he saw a [illegible] of some kind at house No. 10. He was about [illegible] yards away at the time [illegible] He [illegible] saw Hoben strike Zernock [illegible] blows on the head. Pratt said he then made an attempt to stop them, saying "What in hell have you got to do with it?" [illegible] Hoben had a heavy club about three feet long. Two Frenchmen were lying on the ground at the same time. Ainsworth and Evans were standing just back of Hoben.

[illegible] Zernock, Pratt found a cut on the top of his head which was bleeding terribly. There was also cut about the eyes. He could not tell how badly he was hurt. On cross-examination he said the club was triangular in shape, about three inches across and about three feet long. The corners of the weapon were very sharp.

Harry Slatter was next called and stated that one evening at the supper table at the house where he boarded he overheard Ainsworth say that Evans hit him too. Evans was present at the time but did not deny what Ainsworth said.

After a consultation between the attorneys for the prosecution and Commonwealth it was announced by Judge Umbel that the case would not go to the jury. By agreement a verdict of voluntary manslaughter was returned against Hoben and not guilty as to Ainsworth and Evans. Ainsworth pleaded guilty to assault and battery and Evans to aggravated assault and battery. The jury was discharged at [illegible] P. M.

The case of the Commonwealth vs. Rays Anderson, colored, charged with the murder of Pietro Serafini, was taken up before Judge Reppert Tuesday afternoon in the large court room. This murder occurred at Fayette station about two months ago. Most of the afternoon was spent in the selection of a jury, the work being completed about 5:30.

The jury is as follows: Martin Thompson, laborer, Dunbar; William Oliver, miner, Washington; George C. Bryson, gentleman, Menallen; Robert Perry, janitor, Fayette City; John J. Thomas, mine boss, North Union; Littleton Dawson, clerk, Uniontown; Joseph A. Henry, farmer, Nicholson; J. C. Spurgeon, lumber dealer, Henry Clay; C. W. Cregg, stonemason, Brownsville; Allen Frost, farmer, Nicholson; John McMasters, [illegible], Dunbar; George Ansell, miner, Bullskin.

Anderson testified that on the morning of the shooting he was walking along the railroad tracks near Fayette station when he was held up by Serafini and another Italian who fled. Anderson said he shot in self-defense and that afterward Serafini wounded him. Dr. Warren of Dunbar testified that he had removed a bullet from Anderson's arm the morning after the shooting.

An Italian who had been with Serafini the day before the shooting told of Serafini's statement to him before he died at the Cottage State Hospital. Serafini is alleged to have said that Anderson and another negro held him up and after robbing him of $50 shot him down and ran away. Serafini further stated to this witness that he had shot at Anderson as he was running.

FLOOD AT ST. LOUIS.

Waters, Which Had Begun to Recede, are Again Rising Rapidly.

OFFICIAL HIGH WATER MARK

Cause of the Rise Problematical—Forecaster Bowie Says It Will Be of Short Duration and the Decline Will Be Rapid.

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—The Mississippi flood, which began to recede after reaching a stage of 37.5 feet, began a rapid rise, establishing the highest official watermark ever recorded in St. Louis. The rise was rapid after the dawn of day, the water creeping up from 37.1 feet, steadily increasing until at noon the stage had reached 37.75 feet. From that time the river remained stationary.

What has caused the rise is problematical. Forecaster Bowie says the rise will be of short duration and the decline consequently will be rapid.

A report has been current all day that nine persons were drowned by the capsizing of a boat near the Madison railroad depot, but despite all efforts this report has not been confirmed.

It is estimated that 8,000 refugee have found shelter in St. Louis and vicinity. It is also estimated that 4,000 people are still living in flooded homes in Granite City, Venice and Madison. A supply boat has been outfitted and will make daily trips to relieve suffering.

The flood situation in East St. Louis is still critical. It was believed that the flood had been conquered, and work on the levees was stopped, but the additional rise caused work on the levees to be resumed and all business was abandoned once more.

The viaduct leading from East St. Louis to the East bridge, which was a viewing point for thousands of people, was ordered closed, as it is believed the water has weakened the abutments and rendered the bridge dangerous. Trains crossing the Eads bridge must stop at the relay station and passengers are taken by boat to land and transported to places where waiting trains can be boarded.

Reports are received constantly that river thieves are continuing to loot submerged houses of the three stricken cities north of East St. Louis.

Reports indicate that both the Missouri and Mississippi rivers are falling above here. Heavy winds probably had much to do with forcing backwater from lowlands into the channel and helped to cause the rise. For this reason it is believed that the flood crisis is over and a steady decline will continue until normal conditions prevail once more.

Word was received here at 2:10 o'clock that the water is rushing into East St. Louis from the southside in a torrent and people are fleeing for their lives. The heavy pressure that tore away the Illinois Central embankment swept other barriers aside and flowed on in a torrent into the southern portion of the city. There is no means of communication except by telephone, and the excitement is so great that little can be learned.

DARING AND DASTARDLY CRIME

Three Men Held Up By Three Highwaymen, Who Shot and Robbed Two of Them.

Wilkesbarre, June 10.—One of the most daring and dastardly crimes ever perpetrated in this city took place in the southern part of the town. Three men, all delegates to the Staats Verband convention of German Catholic societies, in session here, were walking from Memorial hall toward the hotel where the Altoona delegation were stopping. They were John Baltes, of this city, Benedict Kressler and John Weidman, the latter from Altoona. Just before they reached their hotel they were held up by three highwaymen, who shot and robbed Baltes and Kressler, Weidman escaping without injury. Baltes was shot twice in the abdomen and was removed to the Mercy hospital, where he died. Kressler, who was shot in the calf of the right leg, was cared for by the police and was removed to his hotel, where he is getting along nicely.

A suspect was arrested, who gave his name as George Stroh, of Pittston. Later this afternoon it turns out that he is John Plunkett, of that city. He is being held for further investigation. The county commissioners will meet to-morrow and offer a large reward for the apprehension of the assassins.

Shot for Refusing to Halt.

Kansas City, Mo., June 10.—For refusing to obey the command to halt, Albert Hurley was shot and mortally wounded by John Maloney, a member of Company A, Sixth United States Infantry, who was doing guard duty in Kansas City, Kas., where a mild form of martial law has been in force since the flood.

Relief for Flood Sufferers.

Topeka, Kan., June 10.—It is expected that a special session of the Kansas legislature will be called to pass bills for the relief of the flood sufferers. Word has been received from 25 members of the legislature promising to serve without pay. Nearly $60,000 is now in the flood relief.

ON HIS JOURNEY TO CLEVELAND

Everything Going Smoothly and Indications Are That the Train Will Be On Time.

York, Pa., June 10.—President Roosevelt passed through York on a special train, en route for Cleveland, where he will attend the Hanna-McCormick wedding. The train passed slowly through the city and at every crossing he was greeted by crowds of people and heartily cheered. The President appeared on the platform of the rear coach, and waved his hand to the crowds.

Harrisburg, June 10. — The President's train arrived at Harrisburg at 7:40, and during a five minutes' wait the engine and crews were changed. When the train pulled into the station the President was seated in the rear of the last coach reading a book. A small crowd quickly gathered on the otuside and applauded. Mr. Roosevelt laid down his book and walked out onto the platform. "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen," he said. "I am glad to be with you once again. It is a great pleasure, I assure you."

Altoona, June 10.—President Roosevelt's special train en route to Cleveland, arrived at 11:30. The train consists of a combination baggage car, the Pullman sleeper, "Texas," and Pullman drawing-room car, "Elysian." On account of the lateness of the hour only a small crowd gathered at the station. The President is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Alice, Commander Cowles, Private Secretary Loeb and two detectives. So far the trip was uneventful.

Johnstown, Pa., June 10, 2:30 a. m.—The President's train passed through here on time, running as the second section of regular train No. 2, which section followed the first section in regular order.

A PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED

Fireman So Badly Scalded That He Died — Thirteen Persons Were Injured.

Louisville, Ky., June 10.—A passenger train on the Louisville & Nashville railroad, from New Orleans to Cincinnati, was wrecked on Muldraugh's Hill, 32 miles south of Louisville. John Keller, of Louisville, the fireman, was so badly scalded that he died. Thirteen persons were injured.

The train had just passed through a tunnel and was rounding a sharp curve when the engine careened and rolled to the bottom of a 60-foot hill, burying the engineer and fireman. The mail car, a combination baggage and express, followed, but were stopped by a large tree. The smoker, a day coach, a Pullman and a dining car also left the track, but remained on the roadbed. One of the rails, torn up by the force of the wreck, passed through the smoker, striking Mr. Moorehead, and breaking both his legs. On the train were four physicians, who aided the injured. President Milton H. Smith of the Louisville & Nashville, was on board, but was uninjured.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

Washington, June 10.—James M. Watson, Jr., a clerk in the office of the auditor for the District of Columbia, and the son-in-law of a wealthy retired railroad contractor, was arrested on a charge of embezzlement of government funds. The amount is estimated at $60,000 to $75,000. The warrant makes the specific charge of embezzlement of $8,000 which represents only a portion of the alleged peculations. Watson was not bonded, and in case he or his relatives, several of whom are said to be wealthy, fail to make good the alleged losses, Auditor J. T. Petty will be held responsible for the amount. The auditor's bond is for $20,000.

Jett-White Jury Completed.

Jackson, Ky., June 10.—The jury to try Curtis Jett and Tom White, charged with the shooting of J. B. Marcum, was completed. The present indications are that the taking of testimony will be commenced before noon. The jury are all Magoffin county farmers, who said they knew none of the details of the tragedy. They were accepted after many arguments, challenges and the filing of numerous affidavits. A detail of soldiers joined the elisor in attendance upon the jury. Both sides seem satisfied with the body. The defense exhausted its 15 peremptory challenges and the prosecution used three of its five.

Militia Company Not Molested.

Topeka, Kas., June 10.—As far as known the Osborne militia company, on the way to St. Francis with the men accused of the killing of Daniel Berry and his sons, has not been molested by the parties of armed settlers. W. B. Lockwood, a member of the state legislature, wires that he looks for bloodshed, as the settlers recognize in the present case an opportunity to settle old scores with the cattlemen.

Lightning Causes Death.

Brookville, Pa., June 10.—Two girls were killed and four persons injured by a bolt of lightning which struck the belfrey of Corsica academy, seven miles from here. The lightning passed into the schoolroom, where the girls and boys, frightened by the storm, were huddled together.

Visit By Governor of Porto Rico.

San Juan, P. R., June 10.—Governor Hunt and his family sailed for New York. The governor said there was no truth in the report that he intended to resign, and added that he would return in September.

BAIT FOR SUCKERS

Many coal miners in this and other regions would like to know who used their names in vain to secure the passage of the law forbidding the employment of boys under 16 years of age in the mines.

A great deal of the mining legislation is political legislation pure and simple. Demagogues get into politics always and into the Legislature often. Once lawmakers they lie awake o' nights framing up legislation that will make them famous instead of [illegible] the condition of the people [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] pressed.

The [illegible] in the wise minds of the legislators is never [illegible] question. The [illegible] question in framing the bills is whether they will prove good bait for [illegible].

The bill mentioned above will prove good bait.

Does this mean that the [illegible] Centre of the Coke [illegible] has moved [illegible] Greene county and that [illegible] Carmichaels will be the future Metropolis? Is it possible that the [illegible] labors of the [illegible] Uniontown Standard will come to naught and that the great fuel center of the future will be known as the Carmichaels coke region?

The Connellsville Club is the first instance on record of a social organization paying a dividend.

The call for Farmers' institutes is out and should receive the earnest consideration of all progressive farmers. Scientific farming never appealed to the practical farmer but intelligent farming appeals to intelligent farmers and these are the successful farmers.

Let Uniontown keep the court house. She will have to tax it soon to help pay off her bonded indebtedness.

Uniontown is full of lawyers and it is hard to understand why its Town Council should be so hazy on the law regulating borough bond issues.

Morgantown has an ink thrower whose chief delight is ruining the girls' dresses. There are worse people than ink throwers. The latter ruin clothes, the former murder reputations. The law punishes the ink thrower but the scandal monger is beyond the Salus-Grady bill.

Lawyer Dill knows how to make big corporations and he also seems to know something about the making of successful men.

It is to be hoped that Pennsylvania's building at the St. Louis Exposition will be more worthy of the greatness of the Keystone State than was the one at the Buffalo fair. An appropriation of $100,000 ought to build and furnish a handsome building and if such a building is not found at St. Louis the people will demand an accounting.

Connellsville is reported to have a buried treasure. Here's material for a first class story with fascinating mystery and thrilling interest; also a contract for excavating, which will be the groundwork of the plot.

NEEDS COURT HOUSE.

Somerset People Will Acquiesce in Appropriation, Exchange Says

[illegible] will gladly acquiesce in the appropriation of a reasonable sum of money for that purpose if they are assured that it will be honestly and economically expended. But it is not apparent that in Pennsylvania, whose Constitution and statutes are not quite in unison with the approval of the government, that the Board of Commissioners with the approval of the Court can appropriate an amount equal to 2 per centum of the assessed valuation of the real and personal property of the county [illegible] indebtedness [illegible] without reference to the people. There are possible dangers ahead that must not be overlooked and the people have interests that must be safeguarded against the prospects of possible dishonest, incompetent and slothful officials whose powers are almost arbitrary under the law of the State.

There is no question, however, as to the integrity and capability of the officials who would have custody of the building of a court house at this time and for that reason this would seem a propitious time for the inauguration of the enterprise.

Where Are the Police?

Washington Reporter.

The Uniontown Standard tells that it has been found necessary to have barbed wire stretched across the curbing in front of the windows of two stores there so that the boys can not sit on the curbing. In a town like Uniontown, which is fast taking on city fashions, there should be an ordinance preventing loafing in front of business houses when that loafing annoys the proprietors. Where are the police officers—are there any—to allow such loafing as that?

How Blood Feuds Are Formed

Uniontown News Standard.

If one of Ward's friends should now challenge Stewart to a combat and in the encounter Stewart should be killed, there is no legal redress. The slayer would have to be taken to personal account by one of Stewart's avengers and thus the feud would go on indefinitely. Such is the mischievous and abhorrent logic furnished by the verdict of the jury in the Stewart-Ward case.

THE COLLEGE GRADUATE.

Address of James B. Dill, the Great Corporation Lawyer

In the course of the Commencement address at the University of Minnesota on "The Outlook for the College Graduate in America," James B. Dill, the well known corporation lawyer of New York, declared that the trust movement instead of restricting the field for educated men and women opened for them new opportunities to usefulness. Mr. Dill spoke hopefully regarding the present outlook for educated women, illustrating his points with instances drawn from Wall Street experience.

Mr. Dill asserted that "A college training is a contributing element to business success. Direction of great enterprises calls for the services of educated men and a highly trained intelligence is required to cope with the difficulties of meeting competition, solving new problems and resisting the attacks of rivals.

"A man must be a good generalist to become a good specialist and for this the best preparation is a well spent college course.

"The Corporation, instead of crowding men out, has opened for them new fields of usefulness and has increased the financial return for intelligent concentrated effort. It has to a large extent eliminated the prestige of the rich man's son and [illegible] the career of the Miss Nancy type. Wide awake corporation managers [illegible] level of [illegible] that [illegible] discriminate against [illegible] from motives of self-interest alone [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Dill [illegible] women [illegible] of the [illegible]

"Women's efforts in the direction of business enterprises will be valued [illegible] loyalty, faithfulness and [illegible] are appreciated. Women are not crowding out men; they are only making them hustle to hold their place. The struggle will be productive of increased good results. It is [illegible] interesting and suggestive, but the man who fails [illegible] should not complain. If he respects his mother's memory he will take off his hat and thank God for the [illegible] of American womanhood.

"Much of twentieth century history will be a recital of women's achievements. The period will mark the development of the educated woman's opportunity. It will offer her new chances to extend her usefulness and proclaim her distinctions in the professions, as in every other sphere of life where ability to see clearly and think deeply brings success.

"The man who contends that a woman cannot keep a secret displays ignorance of Wall Street history. Many of the greatest financial and commercial secrets of the day are entrusted to women who act as private secretaries for well known men and the confidence is not misplaced.

"One man of national reputation allows a woman to answer much of his mail without even showing him the letters. To reach the private office of that country you have to first speak your little piece to this woman secretary and if you get past her it is because you have told your story in a straightforward way without beating about the bush. She is an expert in reading character and the man who [illegible] him she fools her soon appreciates his mistake. That woman can give points to thousands of men who think they are receiving [illegible] wages or doing a man's work.

"The American woman is not the less a lady because she adopts a profession or becomes interested in commercial affairs. I honor her all the more for the splendid example she sets her sisters in other lands and for the [illegible] dignity, purity and faithfulness she contributes to the daily routine.

"Will it not be to the [illegible] credit of the American people that they have given the educated woman her best

R. W. FRALICH DEAD.

Former Connellsville Man Expired Tuesday at His Home in Glenfield.

FUNERAL WILL BE TOMORROW.

He Was Manager of the Tri State Telephone Company During the Time of Its Construction—Other Deaths

The Pittsburg papers announce the death yesterday of Roswell R. Fralich at his late residence in Glenfield, Pa. He had been ill for some time but his death was unexpected. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Grace King of Poland, O. Mr. Fralich was a brother-in-law of Milton I. Baird, the builder and principal owner of the Tri-State Telephone system, and was for several years following its completion general superintendent of the system, with headquarters in Connellsville, where he and his wife were well known. After leaving here he was connected with the Federal Telephone Company of Pittsburg, but for the past year or more he has been with the real estate firm of [illegible] of Pittsburg.

Funeral services will be held at the residence of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Milton I. Baird, Glenfield, Thursday afternoon at [illegible] o'clock. Interment private. [illegible] train leaves Ft. Wayne station, Allegheny, at 1:15 city time.

The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Cohen of Uniontown and took place at the home of her brother, Meir Rosenblum, on Snyder street. About [illegible] guests were present. A reception was held after the wedding ceremony and a bountiful supper was served.

THIRTY DROWNED IN FLOOD

City of 32,000 Inhabitants Will Soon Be Under Water

St. Louis, June 10—Thirty is the number of lives known to have been lost in the East St. Louis flood. A telephone message from Congressman Rodenberg says that it is only a question of a few hours until the whole of the city of 32,000 inhabitants is entirely submerged.

The river is rising, and up river reports give no definite information of when the highest stage will be finally reached.

CHAMBERLAIN'S EXIT.

Rumored Resignation of Great Britain's Colonial Secretary.

HOUSE OF COMMONS IS PACKED

Even If He Is Persuaded to Remain in the Cabinet His Influence as a Political Power in Great Britain Is at Least Temporarily Eclipsed.

London June 10—The rumored resignation of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain is the most startling development of the proposal of the chancellor of the exchequer Mr Ritchie to abolish the corn tax the debate on which kept the House of Commons today packed and spellbound until midnight Even if Premier Balfour persuades Mr Chamberlain to remain in the cabinet the colonial secretary's preferential tariff program is hopelessly snowed under and his influence as a political power in Great Britain is least temporarily eclipsed

All the members of the government who contributed to the debate vigorously declared themselves as free traders and frankly opposed Mr Chamberlain's proposals Except for Mr Chaplin not a voice on either side of the house was raised in effective support of Mr Chamberlain's campaign

Former members of cabinet and private members irrespective of party protested against any dickering with Great Britain's fiscal policy The Unionists vied with the Liberals in declaring themselves out and out free traders All that was lacking in the complete rout of the Protectionist minister was Mr Balfour's official pronouncement as premier and on behalf of the government but the cabinet as a whole refused to adopt Mr Chamberlain's views

Black Michael as he is familiarly called was never seen to better advantage The ministers sat with troubled faces Mr Balfour looking especially dejected Mr Chamberlain deserting his usual place paler than ever usual then stretched himself nonchalantly at the end of the treasury bench Throughout the afternoon he never exchanged a word with his colleagues After Mr Ritchie had denounced the colonial secretary's ideas Mr Chamberlain stalked out of the chamber without even a nod to Mr Balfour

Member after member rose from the Unionist ranks some who supported Mr Chaplin refused to eat their words with which they had previously supported the government when the corn tax was originally brought in others lauded Chancellor of the Exchequer Ritchie for his refusal to pander to the spirit of protection all demanded that Mr Balfour enlighten them regarding the government's view as a whole

After the dinner recess the excitement was heightened by the absence of both the colonial secretary and the premier

The latest gossip in best informed quarters is to the effect that Mr Chamberlain will not speak and that he will not resign while the government will endeavor to dispose of the Irish land bill and stave off affairs until October

No Important Developments

Washington June 10—First Assistant Postmaster General Wynne was acting postmaster general in the absence of Postmaster General Payne Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow spent a large part of the day in conference with General Superintendent Losnes of the free delivery system and a number of post office inspectors regarding the investigation but no important developments were made public

LOCKOUT BECOMES GENERAL.

Master Builders Stop Work of All Kinds Until Quarrel Is Settled

Pittsburg June 10—Seven thousand members of all trades unions engaged in building operations in the Pittsburg district are idle in accordance with the action taken by the Master Builders association and which was approved by the Builders league The subsidiary associations are officially notifying their members that all work must cease immediately In turn the members are suspending their men for an indefinite period By the end of the week between 25 000 and 30 000 men of all crafts will be out of employment Never before in the history of Pittsburg has the construction trade been in such a demoralized condition as at present A more complete lockout was never ordered A resumption of work will not be ordered until the stonemasons and bricklayers settle their differences

The direct cause of the entire trouble which has assumed alarming proportions is the result of the rivalry that exists between the bricklayers and the stonemasons in the Pittsburg district Undaunted by the havoc that they have wrought to building operations in this district both sides remain obstinate and refuse to make any concessions whatever The bricklayers demand that the stonemasons join their organization while the stonemasons are determined to be independent Over 10 000 men who will be thrown out of employment are members of unions affiliated with the Building Trades council

As the result of the present trouble the contractors recognize the full value of organizing forces The Builders league in the Pittsburg district has practically absorbed the Builders Exchange

Shot Himself Through the Heart

Shoals Ind June 10—Arthur Lyons the slayer of his stepmother who has been a fugitive from justice for several days in this county pursued by a posse of several hundred shot himself through the heart as he saw himself hemmed in on every side by a band of enraged farmers The members of the posse were within 20 feet of him before he fired Young Lyons was driven from the woods by the posse and in an instant was the target for a dozen guns He returned the fire and made his escape round a turn in the road Later he was overtaken and turning toward his pursuers who were but a short distance behind he shot himself through the heart

Important Financial Statement

New York June 10—The statement is made on the best of authority that an offer has been made to the syndicate which has agreed to underwrite the $75 000 000 new Pennsylvania railroad stock at 120 by a very important financial interest to take over any part or all of the stock that may come into the syndicate's possession In fact it is asserted that this financial interest is ready to take all the new stock It is intimated that with its present holdings the possession of the new stock would probably carry control of that potential property

CHAPTER XXVI

"Thank heaven all women are not alike!" was the bolt he hurled at her. "If you knew as much about Ray Miller as I do you'd act in a more dignified way on a first acquaintance with him."

"On a first—oh, I see what you mean!" Adele put her handkerchief to her face and treated herself to a merry laugh that exasperated him beyond endurance. Then she stood up, smoothing her smile away. "Let's go to breakfast. I'm as hungry as a bear. I told Rayburn—I mean your dangerous friend Mr. Miller—that we'd meet him in the dining room. He says he's crazy for a cup of coffee with whipped cream in it. I ordered it just now."

"The dev—" Alan bit the word in two and strode from the room, she following. The first person they saw in the big dining room was Miller standing at the stove in the center of the room warming himself. He scarcely looked at Alan in his eagerness to have a chair placed for Adele at a little table reserved for three in a corner of the room which was presided over by a slick looking mulatto waiter whose father had belonged to Miller's family.

"I've been up an hour," he said to her. "I took a stroll down the street to see what damage the gang did last night. Every sign is down or hung where it doesn't belong. To tease the owner, an old negro drayman whom everybody jokes with, they took his wagon to pieces and put it together again on the roof of Harmon's drug store. How they got it there is a puzzle that will go down in local history like the building of the pyramids."

"Whisky did it," laughed Adele. "That will be the final explanation."

"I think you are right," agreed Miller.

Alan bolted his food in grim silence, unnoticed by the others. Adele's very grace at the table as she prepared Miller's coffee and her apt repartee added to his discomfiture. He excused himself from the table before they had finished, mumbling something about seeing if the horses were ready, and went into the office. The last blow to his temper was dealt by Adele as she came from the dining room.

"Mr. Miller wants to drive me out in his buggy to show me his horses," she said, half smiling. "You won't mind, will you? You see he'll want his team out there to get back in, and—"

"Oh, I don't mind," he told her. "I see you are bent on making a piece of yourself. After what I've told you about Miller if you still—"

But she closed his mouth with her hand.

"Leave him to me, brother," she said as she turned away. "I'm old enough to take care of myself, and—and—well, I know men better than you do."

When Alan reached home he found that Miller and Adele had been there half an hour. His mother met him at the door with a mysterious smile on her sweet old face as she nodded at the closed door of the parlor.

"Don't go in there now," she whispered. "Adele and Mr. Miller have been there ever since they come. I really believe they are in love with each other. I never saw young folks act more like it. When I met 'em I looked jest like he wanted to kiss me, he was so happy. Now, wouldn't it be fine if they was to get married? He's the nicest man in the state and the best catch."

I've dropped onto a little news.

"Oh, mother," said Alan, "you don't understand. Rayburn Miller is—"

"Well, Adele will know how to manage him," broke in the old lady, too full of her view of the romance to harken to his. "She ain't no fool, son. She'll twist him around her finger if she wants to. She's pretty and stylish and as sharp as a briar. Ah, he's jest seen it all and wants her. You can't fool me! I know how people act when they are in love. I've seen hundreds, and I never saw a worse case on both sides than this is."

Going around to the stables to see that his horses were properly attended to Alan met his uncle leaning over the rail fence looking admiringly at a young colt that was prancing around the lot.

"Christmas gift!" said the old man suddenly. "I ketched you that time, shore pop."

"Yes, you got ahead of me," Alan admitted.

The old man came nearer to him, nodding his head toward the house. "Heerd the news?" he asked with a broad grin of delight.

"What news is that?" Alan asked dubiously.

"Young Miss"—a name given Adele by the negroes and sometimes used jestingly by the family—"Young Miss has knocked the props clean from under Miller."

Alan frowned and hung his head for a moment; then he said:

"Uncle Ab, do you remember what I told you about Miller's opinion of love and women in general?"

The old man saw his drift and burst into a full round laugh.

"I know you told me what he said about love an' women in general, but I don't know as you said what he thought about women in particular. This here's a particular case. It looks as if she's fixed him. I reckon she's done the most complete job out o' such material I ever inspected. He's a gone coon; he'll never make another brag. He's tied hand an' feet."

Alan looked straight into his uncle's eyes. A light was breaking on him. "Uncle Ab," he said, "do you think he is—really in love with her?"

"Lord, Alan, it don't [illegible] more [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] I'll deed you my farm. Now look here, a feller knows his own sister less than he does anybody else. That's because you never have thought of Adele following the trail of womankind. You'd hate for a brother o' that town [illegible] to be [illegible] and then you wouldn't [illegible]. Will you go right over an' [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]?"

Alan and his uncle were returning to the house when Pole Baker dismounted at the front gate and came into the yard.

"I seed Mr. Miller drive past my house a while ago with Miss Adele," he said, "an' I come right over. I want to see all o' you together."

Just then Miller came out of the parlor and descended the steps to join them.

"Christmas gift, Mr. Miller!" cried Pole. "I ketched you that time."

"And if I hadn't, you'd have caught me," retorted the lawyer with a laugh. "I haven't forgotten the row you raised about that suit of clothes. Well, what's the news? How's your family?"

"About as common, Mr. Miller," said Pole. "My wife's gittin' younger an' younger every day. Sence she moved in her new house an' got to whar she [illegible] fences an' makin' flower beds an' one thing another she looks like a new person. I'd 'a' bought her a house long ago ef I'd 'a' knowed she wanted it that bad. Oh, we put on the lugs now. We wipe with napkins after eatin', an' my littlest un sets in a high chair an' says 'I'll jest pass the gravy' like he'd been off to school. Sally says she's a-goin' to send 'em, an' I don't care ef she does. They'll stand head ef they go. Their noggins look like squashes, but they're full o' seeds, an' don't you fergit it."

"[illegible]" intoned Abner Daniel.

"I've dropped onto a little news," said Pole. "You know what a old moonshiner cain't pick up in these mountains from old friends ain't worth foolin' fer."

"Railroad?" asked Miller interestedly.

"That's fer you uns to make out," said Baker. "Now, I ain't a-goin' to give away my authority, but I rid twenty miles yesterday to substantiate what I heard, an' I know it's nothin' but the truth. You all know old Bobby Milburn's been buyin' timber land up about yore property, don't you?"

"I didn't know how much," answered Miller, "but I knew he had secured some."

"Fust and last in the neighborhood o' six thousand acres," affirmed Pole, "an' he's still on the warpath. What fust attracted my notice was findin' out that old Bobby hain't a dollar to his name. That made me suspicious, an' I went to work to investigate."

"Good boy!" said Uncle Abner in an admiring undertone.

"Well, I found out he was usin' Wilson's money an' secretly buyin' fer him, an' what's more he seems to have unlimited authority an' a big bank account to draw from."

There was a startled pause. It was broken by Miller, whose eyes were gleaming excitedly.

"It's blame good news!" he said, eying Alan.

"Do you think so?" said Alan, who was still under his cloud of displeasure with his friend.

"Yes. It simply means that Wilson intends to build that road. He's been quiet and pretending indifference for two reasons—first to bring us to closer terms and next to secure more land."

Then they all went to find Bishop to tell him the news.

CHAPTER XXVII

It was a cold dry day about the middle of January. They were killing hogs at the farm. Seven or eight negroes, men and women, had gathered from all about in the neighborhood to assist in the work and get the parts of the meat usually given away in payment for such services.

Abner Daniel and old man Bishop were superintending these preparations when Alan came from the house to say that Rayburn Miller had just ridden out to see them on business. "I think it's the railroad," Alan informed his father, who always displayed signs of almost childish excitement when the subject came up. They found Miller in the parlor being entertained by Adele, who immediately left the room on their arrival. They all sat down before the cheerful fire. Miller showed certain signs of embarrassment at first, but gradually threw them off and got down to the matter in hand quite with his office manner.

"I've got a proposition to make to you, Mr. Bishop," he opened up with a slight flush on his face. "I've been making some inquiries about Wilson, and I am more and more convinced that he intends to freeze us out—or you, rather—by holding off till you are obliged to sell your property for a much lower figure than you now ask him for it."

"You think so?" grunted Bishop, pulling a long face.

"Yes. But what I now want to do is to show him indirectly that we are independent of him."

"Huh!" ejaculated Bishop even more dejectedly. "Huh, I say!"

Alan was looking at Miller eagerly as if trying to divine the point he was about to make. "I must confess," he smiled, "that I can't well see how we can show independence right now."

"Well, I think I can," said Miller, the flush stealing over his face again. "You see, there is no doubt but Wilson is [illegible]. He thinks he could call on you for that $[illegible] and put you to some trouble raising it without—without, I say, throwing your land on the market."

"I don't blame him," Miller went on smiling, "for it's only what any business man would do who is out for profit, but we must [illegible] him [illegible]."

"Huh, huh!" Bishop grunted in deeper despondency.

"How do you propose to [illegible] the [illegible]?" asked Alan, who had caught the depression from his parent.

"I simply take up the contract," said the lawyer. "You know under the contract we are privileged to pay it to him at will. It would simply paralyze him. He's so confident that you can't take it up that he has not even written to ask if you want to renew it or not. Yes, I'm confident that he'll [illegible] in that [illegible], so confident that he has been, you know, secretly buying land to a [illegible]."

"But," exclaimed Alan, "you know—father has [illegible] the money, and the truth is that he and mother have already had so much worry over the business that they would rather let the land go at what was raised on it than to—to run any more risks."

Bishop groaned out his approval of this inclination of his son's and sat silently nodding his head. The very thought of further risks stunned and chilled him.

Miller's embarrassment now descended on him in full force.

"I was not thinking of having your father disturb his investments," he said. "The truth is I have met with a little financial disappointment in a certain direction. For the last three months I have been raking and scraping among the dry bones of my investments to get up exactly $25,000 to secure a leading interest in a cotton mill at Darley of which I was to be president. I managed to get the money together, and only yesterday I learned that the northern capital that was to guarantee the thing was only in the corner of a fellow's eye up in Boston—a man that had not a dollar on earth. Well, there you are! I've $25,000 and no place to put it. I thought if you had just as soon owe me the money as Wilson that you'd really be doing me a favor to let me take up the notes. You see it would actually [illegible] him. He means business, and this would show him that we are not asking any favors of him. In fact I have an idea it would scare him out of his skin. He'd think we had another opportunity of selling. I'm dying to do this, and I hope you'll let me work it. Really I think you ought to consent. I'd never forgive you to the [illegible] and—well—he might."

All eyes were on the speaker. Bishop had the dazed expression of a bewildered man trying to believe in sudden good luck. Abner Daniel lowered his head and shook with low, subdued laughter.

"You are a jim dandy, young man," he said to Miller. "That's all there is about it. You take the rag off the bush. Oh, my Lord! They say in Alf's meeting house that it's a sin to play poker with no stakes, but Alf's in a game with half the earth put up agin another feller's wad as big as a bale o' hay. Lay down, Alf. Lay down. You've got a full hand an' plenty to draw from."

"We couldn't let you do this, Ray," expostulated Alan.

"But I assure you it is merely a matter of business with me," declared the lawyer. "You know I'm interested myself, and I believe we shall come out all right. I'm simply itching to do it."

Bishop's face was ablaze. The assurance that a wise young business man would consider a purchase of his of sufficient value to put a large amount of money on pleased him, banished his fears, thrilled him.

"If you feel that way," he said, smiling at the corners of his mouth, "go ahead. I don't know but what you are plumb right. It will show Wilson that we ain't beholden to him an' will set him to work, ef anything will."

So it was finally settled, and no one seemed so well pleased with the arrangement as Miller himself. Adele entered the room with the air of one half fearful of intruding, and her three relatives quietly withdrew, leaving her to entertain the guest.

"I wonder what's the matter with your brother," Miller remarked as his eyes followed Alan from the room.

"Oh, brother?" laughed Adele. "No one tries to keep up with his whims and fancies."

"But really," said Miller in a serious tone, "he has mystified me lately. I wonder if he has had bad news from Dolly. I've tried to get into a confidential chat with him several times of late, but he seems to get around it. Really it seems to me at times that he treats me rather coldly."

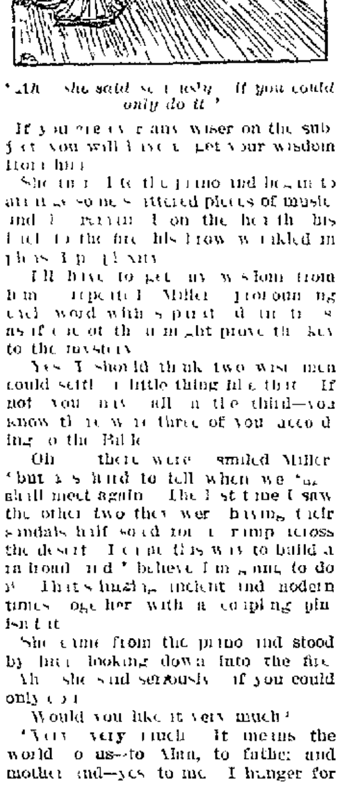
"Oh, if you waste time noticing Al you'll become a beggar!" And Adele gave another amused laugh. "Take my advice and let him alone."

"I almost believe you know what ails him," said Miller, eying her closely.

"I know what he thinks ails him," the girl responded.

"And won't you tell me what—what he thinks ails him?"

"No, I couldn't do that," answered our young lady with a knowing smile.



"Ah," she said seriously, "if you could only do it."

"If you are ever any wiser on the subject you will have to get your wisdom from him."

She turned to the piano and began to arrange some scattered pieces of music, and Miller remained on the hearth, his back to the fire, his brow wrinkled in [illegible] perplexity.

"I'll have to get my wisdom from him," repeated Miller, pronouncing each word with separate distinctness as if one of them might prove the key to the mystery.

"Yes, I should think two wise men could settle a little thing like that. If not, you may call in the third—you know there were three of you, according to the Bible."

"Oh, there were," smiled Miller, "but it's hard to tell when we three shall meet again. The last time I saw the other two they were having their sandals half soled for a tramp across the desert. I came this way to build a railroad, and I believe I'm going to do it. That's hitching ancient and modern times together with a coupling pin, isn't it?"

She came from the piano and stood by him looking down into the fire. "Ah," she said seriously, "if you could only do it!"

"Would you like it very much?"

"Very, very much. It means the world to us—to Alan, to father and mother and—yes, to me. I hunger for independence."

"Then it shall be done," he said fervently.

When the Nerves Are Shattered

When the nerves are shattered one cannot think, work, eat, sleep or accomplish anything.

It is a case of force all the time, a continued effort to keep going—no life—no energy, no ambition—upset at anything—nervous headaches—crying spells, fits of depression and utter despondency. Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills cure this condition to stay cured by rebuilding the shattered nervous system, nourishing the nerve centers and resupplying what is lacking, the active principle of life—nerve force.

Mrs J A McBeth of No 206 West Fayette St, Connellsville, Pa, says: "I like Dr A W Chase's Nerve Pills very much and consider it an excellent medicine for shattered or weak nerves. When I got the box at Graham & Newcomer's drug store I was restless, nervous and not sleeping well. The medicine gave me nerve's calmness, general strength and restful sleep. This is why I like it. They stopped at the same time a tingling and pain in the nerves that had bothered me for a long time." Fifty cents a box at dealers or Dr A W Chase Medicine Co, Buffalo, N Y. Pimples?

Pimples, boils, scrofula, sores and other disfiguring skin eruptions arise from impure blood and why take evil tasting doses of drug saturated alcohol, when you can get small, pleasant and tasteless Johnston's Tonic Capsules. They make pure blood and cure skin troubles.

Johnston's Tonic Capsules are the very best vegetable blood medicines condensed into a small easily taken tasteless capsule, without alcohol. You can carry them in a tiny box in the pocket and take them anywhere without attracting notice. In them you get the condensed curatives of true medicinal plants, roots, barks, blossoms, leaves and fruit—the health giving qualities nature has stored in the products of field, swamp, and wildwood.

Johnston's Tonic Capsules are the surest, safest, most reliable, convenient and satisfactory medicine that can be taken to purify and enrich the blood. They unload it of every impurity and at the same time so promote the nutritive functions as to abundantly supply it with new, rich and life sustaining qualities. They make the blood pure and rich and through pure blood the bodily structures come right, because they depend on the blood for nourishment and renewal.

For over 4 years Johnston's Tonic Capsules have been held in high esteem as a most reliable and satisfactory remedy for scrofula, rheumatism, eczema, old sores, painful swellings, kernels and enlarged glands, catarrh, scurvy, boils, liver complaint, dyspepsia, jaundice, constipation, kidney troubles and a long list of common ails and ills.

We have great confidence in this medicine, a confidence born of many years experience with it and we make the following extraordinary offer. Send us a dollar for a large box of Johnston's Tonic Capsules or buy the same of your druggist, use half of them and if you are not satisfied mail the balance to us and we will return your money. Test them at our risk and be your own judge.

MANY BOYS LET OUT.

Act Passed By Legislature Cause of Many Being Discharged

IN THIS REGION'S COAL MINES.

No Boy Is Now Permitted to Work in Mine or Coke Yards Who Is Not Over Sixteen Years Old—Law Has Flaws

Many boys throughout the Connellsville coke region have within the last few weeks lost positions they have held for several years They are pining for the coke yard and the coal mines To many of them the sports of youth are unknown Field and stream hold no charm Under a blazing sun and before a steaming coke oven or in the black depths of the coal mine is their choice

Probably over a thousand boys have been discharged in the Connellsville and Lower Connellsville regions as the result of the enforcement of an act passed at the last session of the Legislature and signed by Governor S W Pennypacker on May 1 The law was directed chiefly to the operators of mines in the anthracite coal region There thousands of boys are employed about the mines on the breakers They range in age from eight and ten years to 16 and 17 Their wages are meagre In the Connellsville region and in fact in the mines of the Pittsburg district there are many boys employed but not generally as they are in the anthracite region They are hired chiefly as trapper boys in the mines and at similar light work for which they receive good wages $1 to $1.15 a day Most of the boy labor in the mines however and also on the coke yards through the Connellsville region is that employed in assisting fathers or brothers who have jobs in the mines or on the coke yards A good stout boy of 12 to 15 years can add considerable to the monthly wage especially at the time when the father or brother is employed on a rib or in an easy working place where the chief work connected with mining the coal is in shoveling or loading it into the wagons Frequently the boy can get an output of $1.50 or $2 a day On the coke yard he waters ovens in which there is little labor aside from the intense heat during the summer and helps to fork it into the wheelbarrows

The discharge of the boys and the order issued to comply with the law and prohibit them working in the mines or about the coke plants unless they are 16 years old or over is hurting the boys more than it is the coke operators The latter have replaced the boys with old ones perhaps at better pay and their elimination as helpers for parents or relatives simply makes work for more men about the mines

One effect the law will have next school term will be an increase in the number of pupils at schools in districts where the schools draw from the coke villages

The apparent discovery has been made by Representative Harry Boulton one of the publishers of the Houtzdale Citizen that the act of May 1 1903 prohibiting boys aged under 16 from working in the coal mines is worthless because of its numerous flaws The act's defects were found after some of the operators in the Clearfield region had begun to discharge boys under 16 Miners then asked Representative Boulton to give his interpretation of it In the Citizen he says

A careful examination of the act discloses a series of absurd and ludicrous mistakes clerical and legal which in our opinion makes the act entirely inoperative and without effect so far as bituminous mines are concerned even if it has any effect in anthracite mines

In the first place the act attempts to fix the age limit at which boys shall be employed in coal mines whether anthracite or bituminous and this it does by purporting to amend two sections of two entirely different acts of Assembly to wit the act of 1891 relating to the regulation of anthracite mining and the act of 1885 relating to bituminous mining It is a very serious question whether this amending of two separate acts governing distinctly separate industries and territory does not violate the constitutional provision against legislating upon more than one subject in one bill The legislation of the State has divided the coal mining territory into two districts one known as the anthracite and the other known as the bituminous field and has provided for each a special and distinct system of control

Under the anthracite system established by the act of 1891 the age limit of boys employed in the anthracite mines is 14 while in bituminous mines the age limit fixed by the act of 1885 is 12 years Certainly these two pieces cannot be pieced together in one bill for the purpose of amendment Secondly the title of the act says that it is to amend section 17 of the act of 1885 Section 17 of that act does not relate to the employment of boys in mines at all It is section 1 that covers that matter But the title gives no evidence of purpose beyond saying Also to amend section 17 of an act * * * approved June 30 1885 and therefore the title because of this mistake wholly fails to disclose the purpose of the act The constitution requires that the title clearly express the subject of the bill

Thirdly section 1 of the act amends article 9 section 1 of the act of 1891 relating to the anthracite mines and section 2 which is supposed to amend the law as to the age limit of boys in bituminous mines simply amends article 1 section 1 of the act of 1891 relating to anthracite mines over again This was a mistake of course but the mistake goes further than merely misquoting the article and section It goes on and really recites at length the first section of article 9 of the act of 1891

Lastly the act of 1885 is not now in force It was repealed by the act of 1891 which now provides the system under which bituminous mines are operated and regulated The act of 1891 in article 17 fixes the age limit of boys in bituminous mines at 12 years So that if this combination of errors or comedy of errors had not occurred the act could not have had effect in bituminous mines

COMING SHOWS.

Pawnee Bill and Gentry Brothers Are Heading This Way

One of the clever features of the Gentry Bros show this year is the introduction of a troupe of ponies who have actually acquired a musical education Nine beautifully spotted Shetland ponies form into line and have sleigh bells attached to their heads at the word of command from their trainer they proceed to play a selection which can easily be recognized by the audience and which never fails to bring forth a generous round of applause There is no doubt a treat in store for those who visit the performances that are to be given here Tuesday June 16

With gorgeous posters many colored pamphlets and an abundance of interesting literature scattered broadcast the managers of the Pawnee Bill Historic Wild West have earnestly endeavored to give the public an adequate idea of their magnificent exhibition But they must have only partially succeeded One must visit the performance must see with his own eyes must listen with his own ears in drinking in with his sense the full glory grandeur and superb dramatic presentations of this mighty exposition It is nothing short of an educational exposition The promoters of this most instructive and entertaining of all amusements are receiving patronage of the best of all public spirited and patriotic citizens for the clean cut educational and moral character of their meritorious performances Men and women mentally physically and morally are all better off for having seen this splendid show Miss our people will have another opportunity to see it

DEPENDS ON WHEELING.

New Coke Region Must Have Terminals There

Wheeling June 9—The city has been given the assurance made to last that the Wheeling Waynesburg & Eastern Railway Company intended to start building its road connecting Wheeling with the coke regions of Pennsylvania as soon as the city will guarantee it the proper terminal facilities the Wheeling Intelligencer says

J H Hurlbut and C O Brown of New York representing the railway company and John A Howard the company's local attorney talked with Henry H Edwards of Moundsville and the joint committee on streets and alleys and grades railroads of the committee of the council of Wheeling at the committee rooms in the city building for the purpose of discussing the company's plans and coming to some kind of an understanding

Mr Hurlbut explained the company's side of the case He said that they had spent a great deal of money in the Wheeling Waynesburg & Eastern railway project The road itself he said had already been financed and much surveying had been done All the company wanted was for the city to guarantee them terminal facilities and they would go ahead with the road otherwise they would drop the whole thing

The eastern terminus of the road as shown on the map is Carmichaels several miles the other side of Waynesburg The road passes through Rhedive Waynesburg Rogersville Ritan Graysville Maysville Viola and comes to Wheeling by way of Shepherds and Wheeling creek

Rockwood's New Industry

Four kilns of over 140 000 each will be erected for the plant of the Rockwood Brick & Coal Company at Rockwood It is expected that when the plant gets under full way these kilns can be filled burned and emptied every 10 days The drying capacity will be doubled over the first design The machinery is being placed and no doubt the plant will be advanced far enough in the next 30 days to begin the manufacture of brick for its own use About 25 men are employed in the construction work

THE GRIP OF HONOR

.. By . .

CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Author of "The Southerners," "The Bishop," "In the Wasp's Nest," "Woven With the Ship," Etc

If you have ever read one of Brady's stories you do not need to be told of the treat in store for you His name tells it all

HIGHLY PRAISED BY THE PRESS

Louisville Courier-Journal

Were it valuable only for the fine picture of Paul Jones that it presents it would appeal strongly to lovers of strong fiction * * * To all those who love a romantic tale imbued with the sweetness of love stories The Grip of Honor will come as a most welcome and grateful offering

New York Times

Every character is vital clearly detached from its historic background and in association with them all the reader will keep good company by which he himself can hardly fail to be ennobled Too much cannot be said of the value of such society to the young

Life New York

There are several very dramatic situations in the story—particularly the episode of the real girl in the picture frame and the escape of the hero from the British ship after he had once been strung up at the yard arm

Denver Republican

The finest word picture of the battle between the Serapis and the Bon Homme Richard to be found in fiction

You will deny yourself a great pleasure if you fail to read

THE GRIP OF HONOR.
